1. Introduction

This guide applies to the Patents Court only. The Intellectual Property Enterprise Court has its own guide to which users of that court are referred.

The general guidance applicable to matters in the Chancery Division, as set out in the Chancery Guide, also applies to patent actions unless specifically mentioned below. Thus practitioners should consult this guide together with the Chancery Guide.

“PD63” refers to the Practice Direction - Patents and Other Intellectual Property Claims which supplements CPR Part 63.

2. Allocation

Actions proceeding in the Patents Court are allocated to the multi-track (Part 63.1(3)). Attention is drawn to Part 63.8 and PD63.5 (case management). Since October 2014, claims issued in the Patents Court have received claim numbers with the prefix HP-.

3. The judges of the Patents Court

The judges of the Patents Court and their clerks are set out in Annex A to this guide, together with their contact details.

Trials of cases with a technical difficulty rating of 4 or 5 will normally be heard by Meade J or Mellor J or by suitably qualified deputy High Court judges.

4. Judges able and willing to sit out of London

If the parties so desire, for the purpose of saving time or costs, the Patents Court will sit out of London. Before any approach is made to the Chancery Listing Officer, the parties should discuss between themselves the desirability of such a course. If there is a dispute as to venue, the court will resolve the matter on an application. Where there is no dispute, the Chancery Listing Officer should be contacted as soon as possible so that arrangements can be put in place well before the date of the proposed hearing.

5. Intellectual Property Court Users’ Committee

This committee (the “IPCUC”) considers the problems and concerns of intellectual property litigators and litigants. Membership of the committee includes the judges of the Patents Court, representatives of the Intellectual Property Bar Association, the Intellectual Property Lawyers Association, the Chartered Institute of Patent Attorneys, the Chartered Institute of Trade Mark Attorneys and the IP Federation. Anyone having views concerning the improvement of intellectual property litigation is invited to make his or her views known to the committee, preferably through the relevant professional representative on the committee. They may also be communicated to the secretary, whose details are in Annex A to this guide.

5A. Use of junior advocates

The Patents Court wishes to promote diversity among those appearing before it. Parties may choose how to use their advocates (and representatives generally), but greater use of junior advocates will be encouraged.

A “junior advocate” is a barrister, solicitor advocate, or other representative with higher rights of audience, who in each case is not either Queen’s Counsel or a partner of their firm.

Parties are encouraged to consider whether interim applications, or parts of interim applications may be presented by junior advocates. Disclosure issues, where they arise at a Case Management Conference or at another separate hearing are a good example of issues on which it may be appropriate and helpful for the argument to be prepared and undertaken by a junior advocate.

Further provisions about junior advocates appear at 7.3A, 12.9A and 19.1 below.

Procedure in the Patents Court

6. Statements of case

Time limits

6.1 In general, the time limits set out in Part 15 apply to litigation of patents and registered designs. However, Part 63.7 modifies Part 15 in respect of the time limits for filing defences and replies.

Content of statements of case

6.2 In general, statements of case (i.e. the pleadings of all parties) must comply with the requirements of Part 16. Furthermore, they should comply with Part 63.6 and PD63.4. Copies of important documents referred to in a statement of case (e.g. an advertisement referred to in a Particulars of Infringement or documents cited in Grounds of Invalidity) should be served with the statement of case. Where any such document requires translation, a translation should be served at the same time.

Service on the Comptroller-General of Patents, Designs and Trade Marks (“the Comptroller”)

6.3 Parties are reminded of the requirement in Part 63.14(3) that, where a remedy is sought that would if granted affect an entry in any United Kingdom Patent Register (for example the revocation of a patent or registered design), they are required to serve on the Comptroller: the claim form, counterclaim or application notice; any other relevant statement of case such as grounds of invalidity (including any amended statement of case); and any accompanying documents. In addition, PD63.14.1 requires that, when such an order is made, the party in whose favour the order is made must serve it on the Comptroller within 14 days.

Independent validity of claims

6.4 Where one party raises the issue of validity of a patent, the patentee (or other relevant party) should identify which claims of the patent are alleged to have independent validity as early as possible.

7. Active case management and streamlined procedure

7.1 The claimant should apply for a case management conference (“CMC”) within 14 days of the date when all defendants who intend to file and serve a defence have done so (PD63.5.3). If the claimant fails to do so, then any other party may apply for a CMC (PD63.5.6). Any party may apply in writing for a CMC prior to the above periods. Where a case has been transferred from another division or from another court, the claimant must file for a CMC within 14 days of the transfer (PD63.5.4).

7.2 Almost invariably CMCs in the Patents Court will be conducted by a judge. However, in the limited circumstances set out in PD63.5.2(2) (see also para.15 below), a Master may conduct a CMC. Bundles in accordance with PD63.5.9 should be filed with the court.

7.3 In general, parties should endeavour to agree directions prior to the date fixed for the CMC. Although the court has the right to amend directions which have been agreed, this will only happen where there is good reason for doing so. A specimen order for directions is Annex B to this Guide.

7.3A Clients need not attend a CMC unless the Court otherwise orders. A representative who has conduct of the case must attend from each firm of solicitors instructed in the case. At least one of the advocates retained in the case on behalf of each party should also attend. Where a party has retained more than one advocate (e.g. leading and junior counsel), there is no requirement that all attend. On many case management issues, junior advocates within a team may be well placed to assist the Court. Parties should consider in every case (a) whether attendance by the more (or most) senior advocates instructed in the case is reasonably required, and (b) whether, even where that is the position, at least some of the matters arising may appropriately be dealt with by a junior advocate.

7.4 In accordance with the overriding objective, the court will actively manage the case. In making any order for directions, the court will consider all relevant matters and have regard to the overriding objective with particular emphasis on proportionality, the financial position of the parties, the degree of complexity of the case, the importance of the case and the amount of money at stake.

7.5 The parties are reminded of their continuing obligation to assist the court to further the overriding objective. Moreover, it is the duty of the parties' advisors to remind litigants of the existence of mediation or other forms of alternative dispute resolution as a possible means to resolve disputes. In particular, the parties should consider:

(a) The need for and/or scope of any oral testimony from factual or expert witnesses. The court may confine cross-examination to particular issues and to time limits. The parties should consider whether oral testimony of witnesses should be given by video facility.

(b) The need for, and scope of, any disclosure of documents. The requirements of Part 31.5(3)-(5) relating to disclosure reports apply to actions in the Patent Court.

(c) The need for any experiments, process or product descriptions.

(d) The need for an oral hearing or whether a decision can be made on the papers. If an oral hearing is considered to be appropriate, the court may order that the hearing be of a fixed duration.

(e) Whether all issues should be tried together or whether it would be advantageous for one or more issues to be tried in advance of the remaining issues

(f) Whether there is a need for a document setting out the basic undisputed technology (a "technical primer" or agreed statement of common general knowledge and other technical matters, as to which see para. 14.6 below), and if so, its scope and the steps to be taken to achieve agreement of it.

(g) Whether a scientific adviser should be appointed.

(h) The technical complexity of the action. Technical complexity is measured on a scale of 1 to 5, with 1 being the least complex and 5 the most.

- (i) Whether a costs-capping order should be made.
- (j) Whether there should be a stay of proceedings for mediation or other form of alternative dispute resolution.
- (k) Whether the case is of sufficient value that it ought to be exempt from the costs management provisions in Rules 3.12-3.18.

Streamlined procedure

7.6 Any party may at any time apply to the court for a streamlined procedure in which:

- (a) all factual and expert evidence is in writing;
- (b) there is no requirement to give disclosure of documents;
- (c) there are no experiments;
- (d) cross-examination is only permitted on any topic or topics where it is necessary and is confined to those topics; or for any variant on the above.

7.7 Prior to applying for a streamlined procedure, the party seeking it should put its proposal to other parties in the proceedings and should endeavour to agree a form of order.

7.8 If the parties agree to a streamlined procedure, the proposed form of order should be put to the judge for approval as a paper application.

8. Admissions

8.1 With a view to early elimination of non-issues, practitioners are reminded of the necessity of making admissions as soon as possible. This should be done as early as possible, for instance, in a defence or reply. Thus, in a defence, a party may admit the acts complained of or that his article/process has certain of the features of a claim. In a reply a patentee may be able to admit prior publication of cited documents. For the effect of admissions, see Part 14.

8.2 Parties should also consider serving a notice to admit facts in accordance with Rule 32.18 for the purpose of identification of points not in dispute: for example, by asking whether or not the defendant disputes that his article/process has certain features of the claim the real dispute can be narrowed. Thus the ambit of disclosure and of witness and expert statements will be narrowed.

8.3 Parties are reminded that when deciding the issue of costs, a court can take into account the conduct of the parties, including whether it was reasonable for a party to contest a particular issue, see Rule 44.2(5)(b).

8.4 The position should be kept under constant review. If there is any alteration in the admissions that can be made, the identity of the claims said to have independent validity, or the claims alleged to be infringed, that information should be communicated forthwith to the other parties.

9. Alternative Dispute Resolution (“ADR”)

9.1 While emphasising its primary role as a forum for deciding patent and registered design cases, the Patents Court encourages parties to consider the use of ADR (such as, but not confined to, mediation and conciliation) as an alternative means of resolving disputes or particular issues within disputes. A fuller list of the different types of ADR can be found in section 4.11 of the Guide to the Intellectual Property Enterprise Court.

9.2 Settlement of disputes by ADR has many advantages including significant saving of costs and providing parties with a wider range of solutions than can be offered by litigation. Legal representatives should consider and advise their clients as to the possibility of attempting to resolve the dispute via ADR. In an appropriate case, the Patents Court may stay a case for a specified period of time to encourage and enable the parties to use ADR.

10. Applications for interim injunctions affecting the National Health Service

10.1 Attention is drawn to PD25A para. 5.2, which requires the Court, when making an order for an interim injunction, to consider whether to require the applicant to give an undertaking to pay any damages sustained by a person other than the respondent who suffers loss as a result of the order. Where a party seeks an interim injunction which would affect dealings in a pharmaceutical product or medical device purchased by the National Health Service (“NHS”), the Court will consider whether the applicant should give such an undertaking in favour of the NHS. The applicant must notify the Department of Health by email to patents@dhsc.gov.uk of (i) the application when it is made and (ii) any order made following the application as soon as practicable. Notification to this email address will amount to notice to all four NHS agencies in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

11. Disclosure

11.1 Parties are obliged to provide disclosure in accordance with Part 31 as modified by Rule 63.9 and PD63.6.1-6.3 and as modified by Practice Direction 51U – Disclosure Pilot for the Business and Property Courts.

Process and/or product description

11.2 Where appropriate, parties are encouraged to provide a process and/or product description (“PPD”) instead of standard disclosure relating to processes or products which are alleged to infringe or are otherwise relevant to proceedings.

11.3 Subject to 11.5 below, PPDs must be adequate to deal with the nature of the allegation that has been advanced by the other party or parties. The parties have joint responsibility at an early stage to determine the nature of the case advanced so that the PPD is adequate to deal with that case.

11.4 Parties should bear in mind when preparing a PPD that they may be called on to prove it at trial. Any material omission or inaccuracy could result in a costly adjournment with consequential adverse orders, including as to costs. A PPD ought to be accompanied by a signed written statement which:

- (i) states that the person making the statement is personally acquainted with the facts to which the description relates;
- (ii) verifies that the description is a true and complete description of the product or process; and
- (iii) contains an acknowledgement by the person making the statement that he or she may be required to attend court in order to be cross-examined on the contents of the description.

11.5 Insofar as a party is not able to verify that the PPD is a true and complete description of all relevant aspects of its product or process (for example because it does not make certain components in its product and does not know how they work), then the correct course is for the party to verify such parts as it is able, and to serve a disclosure list (which may or may not contain any documents) in relation to the remainder.

11.5A Practice Direction 57AC does not apply to the written statements accompanying a PPD under 11.4 above.

Descriptions and drawings of processes or products

11.6 Parties are encouraged to agree descriptions and drawings of processes and/or products which are the subject of infringement proceedings or are alleged to constitute relevant prior art.

Models or apparatus of processes or products

11.7 If a party wishes to adduce a model or apparatus at trial, it should, if practicable, ensure that directions for such are given at the first CMC (PD63 para. 8.1). Parties should endeavour to view and agree the accuracy of such models or apparatus where possible well in advance of the date of trial.

Inspection on terms as to confidentiality

11.8 It is often the case in patent cases that one or both parties disclose documents which they are only willing permit inspection of on terms as to confidentiality. Parties should endeavour to agree confidentiality clubs and agreements. Specimen confidentiality agreements form Annex C to this Guide; these specimen agreements may need adaptation to suit the circumstances of a particular case.

General matters relating to hearings of applications and trials

12. Arrangements for listing

12.1 Attention is drawn to the Practice Statement: Listing of Cases for Trial in the Patents Court issued by the Judge in Charge of the Patents Court in February 2022 reproduced in Annex D to this Guide.

12.2 The Chancery Listing Officer is responsible for the listing of all work of the Patents Court. The Chancery Listing Officer and his staff are located in the Rolls Building. The office is open to the public from 10.00 am to 4.30 pm each day. The telephone number is 020 7947 7717 and the email address is ChanceryJudgesListing@justice.gov.uk.

12.3 Parties are encouraged to agree dates for trials and interim applications where possible, with reference to the Chancery Listing Office's advertised lead times, and to approach the Court by email with agreed hearing dates. If agreement is not possible and an appointment to fix is required then the applicant should first obtain an appointment from the Chancery Listing Officer and give 3 clear days' notice to all interested parties of the date and time fixed.

12.4 A party should not seek to list an application or cause the opposing advocate or counsel's clerk to "pencil in" a date for hearing prior to raising with the proposed respondent the subject-matter of the application so that, where possible, agreement may be reached on the subject-matter of the application. Applicants who fail properly to consult with the respondents prior to listing an application may be met with an adverse costs order.

Short applications

12.5 Short applications (i.e. those estimated to last no more than 1 hour) will usually be heard before the normal court day starts at 10.30 am e.g. at 9.30 or 10 am. These can be issued and the hearing date arranged at any time by attendance at the Chancery Listing Office. Attention is drawn to PD63.5 about the filing of documents and skeleton arguments.

Urgent applications and without notice applications

12.6 A party wishing to apply without notice to the respondent(s) should contact the Chancery Listing Office. In cases of emergency in vacation or out of normal court hours, the application should be made to the duty Chancery judge.

Interim injunction applications and expedited trials

12.7 Applicants for interim remedies (in particular, interim injunctions) and respondents are encouraged to consider whether an expedited (speedy) trial would better meet the interests of justice. Applications for expedited trials may be made at any time but should be made as soon as possible and notice given to all parties. Parties are reminded that varying degrees of expedition are possible. Some cases may warrant extreme expedition, others a lesser degree.

12.8 When an application for an interim injunction is made the applicant should, where practicable, make prior investigations with the Chancery Listing Officer about trial dates on an unexpedited and expedited basis having regard to the estimated length of trial.

Pre-trial reviews (PTRs)

12.9 As with other cases in the Chancery Division, a pre-trial review should be held between 4-6 weeks before trial in all cases estimated to last five days or more. An important issue to be discussed at the pre-trial review will be the trial timetable.

12.9A At the time of the PTR each party should consider which aspects of the advocacy at trial could appropriately be conducted by a junior advocate.

September trials

12.10 The Patents Court will consider, in particular if the parties so desire and/or the case is urgent and/or it is necessary to meet the Patents Court's objective of bringing on trials within one year, hearing trials in September.

13. Time estimates and technical complexity ratings

13.1 In providing appropriate time estimates, parties must appreciate the need to give realistic and accurate time estimates and ensure that the time estimate includes a discrete reading time for the court to read the papers prior to the hearing of the application or trial. In general, the court will wish to read the skeleton arguments, the patent (where relevant), the prior art (where relevant), expert reports and other key documents (e.g. substantive witness statements). Advisors should bear in mind the technical difficulty of the case when considering the reading time estimate. The court will consider the imposition of guillotines where time estimates are in danger of being exceeded.

13.2 Similarly, in proving technical complexity ratings, the parties must appreciate the need to give realistic and accurate estimates of the technical complexity of the case. The technical complexity rating should take account of the complexity of both the patent and the prior art as well as the complexity of the infringement issues and likely evidence.

Revised time estimates and technical complexity ratings

13.3 Where parties and their legal advisors consider that a time estimate that has been provided (e.g. at the CMC) has become unrealistic, they have a duty to notify the new time estimate to the Chancery Listing Office or, where appropriate, the judge's clerk as soon as possible. The same applies to estimates of technical complexity.

14. Documents and timetable

14.1 Bundling for the hearing of applications and trials is of considerable importance and should be approached intelligently. The Direction in Annex E on Standard Trial Bundles in the Patents Court shall be followed. Subject to that, the general guidance given in Appendix 6 Chapter 21 of the Chancery Guide, paragraphs 21.34 to 21.72, should be followed. Solicitors or patent attorneys who fail to follow this Direction and the general guidance do so may be required to explain why and may be penalised personally in costs.

14.2 If it is known which judge will be taking the hearing, papers for the hearing should be lodged directly with that judge's clerk. If there is insufficient time to lodge hard copies before the deadline, documents of significance (and particularly skeleton arguments) should be supplied by e-mail to the clerk of the judge concerned, followed up by clean hard copies.

14.3 It is the responsibility of both parties to ensure that all relevant documents are lodged with the clerk of the judge who will be taking the hearing by noon two days before the date fixed for hearing unless some longer or shorter period has been ordered by the judge or is prescribed by this guide.

14.4 The judges request that all important documents also be supplied to them on a USB stick in a format convenient for the judge's use (normally the current or a recent version of Microsoft Word for Windows or as a text searchable pdf). These will usually include skeleton arguments, important patents, prior art, the witness statements and expert reports.

14.5 Prior to trial, parties should ensure that they comply with the requirements of PD63.9 concerning the provision of a trial timetable, trial bundle and reading guide for the judge. The trial timetable should be detailed and set out the times and dates that witnesses will be required to give evidence, as well as any days that any witness is unavailable to give evidence.

14.6 The parties are encouraged to produce a technical primer setting out the agreed basic undisputed technology relevant to the case, or an agreed statement of common general knowledge and other relevant technical matters. Where used, a primer should be produced in advance of the expert reports to avoid substantially the same material being described by each expert. Ideally primers should be agreed documents. Generally, where the parties are not able to agree whether to include a particular issue ought to be included in the primer, rather than having a “marked-up” primer showing the areas of dispute, the issue should be omitted and dealt with by the experts in their reports. Where a technical primer has been produced, the parties should identify those parts which are agreed to form part of the common general knowledge. Where an agreed statement of common general knowledge and other technical matters is used, it should be produced in time for the Court’s trial pre-reading and should include agreed common general knowledge, agreed technical information which is not common general knowledge but which is relevant (for example how the alleged infringement works) and a list of disputed aspects of common general knowledge (which list of disputed aspects should be cross-referenced to the expert reports).

14.7 Skeleton arguments should be lodged in time for the judge to read them before an application or trial.

(a) In the case of applications, this should normally be 10:30am the previous working day (or, in the case of short applications, 3pm)

(b) In the case of trials, this should normally be at least two working days before commencement of the trial. In substantial cases, a longer period (to be discussed with the clerk to the judge concerned) may be needed.

14.8 Skeleton arguments which refer to confidential information should where possible do so in a separate confidential appendix. If that is not practicable, a redacted non-confidential version of the skeleton argument should be filed at the same time as the confidential version. Similarly, redacted non-confidential versions of witness statements and experts reports which contain confidential information should be filed wherever practicable.

14.9 Where any party wishes to put documents to a witness in cross-examination, these should generally be supplied to the witness sufficient time in advance so that the witness has time to consider them before giving evidence. Generally, documents for cross-examination should be supplied at least 48 hours before the witness gives evidence. However, more time may be required depending on the nature and number of the documents intended to be relied upon. The number of documents should be kept within manageable bounds. In the case of documents over 4 pages long, there should be an indication of which parts will be put to the witness.

14.10 Following the evidence in a substantial trial, a short adjournment may be granted to enable the parties to summarise their arguments in writing before oral argument.

Transcripts

14.11 In trials where a transcript of evidence is being made and supplied to the judge, the transcript should be supplied by e-mail and in hard copy. Where real time transcription is being used, the Court should be provided with a terminal.

15. Telephone and remote applications

15.1 For short matters (up to 2 hours), the judges of the Patents Court are willing to hear applications by telephone conference or by video platform in accordance with relevant Practice Directions.

15.2 The parties must liaise with the judge's clerks in relation to the setting up of the call/video hearing, recording, and transcription. Parties are reminded of the need for form EX107 where third party transcription services are used.

15.3 This procedure should be used where it will save costs.

Miscellaneous

16. Jurisdiction of Masters

16.1 Masters have only a limited jurisdiction in patent matters (see PD63.5.2(2)). Generally it is more convenient for consent orders (on paper or in court) to be made by a judge even where a Master has jurisdiction to do so.

16.2 Where a Master makes a consent order disposing of an action which has been fixed, it is the duty of all the parties' representatives to inform the Chancery Listing Officer that the case has settled. Where the validity of the patent was in issue, the Comptroller should also be informed.

17. Consent orders

17.1 The court is normally willing to make consent orders without the need for the attendance of any parties. A draft of the agreed order and the written consent of all the parties' respective solicitors or counsel should be supplied to the Chancery Listing Office. Unless the judge considers a hearing is needed, he will make the order in the agreed terms by initialing it or approving it electronically. It will be drawn up accordingly and sent to the parties.

18. Draft judgments

18.1 Many judgments, particularly after a full trial, will be reserved and handed down at a later date, as advised by the Chancery Listing Office. Prior to that, the practice has arisen to provide the parties' legal representatives (or litigants in person) with a copy of the draft judgment for advocates to notify the court of typographical and obvious errors (if any).

The text may be shown, in confidence, to the parties, but only for the purpose of obtaining instructions and on the strict understanding that the judgment, or its effect, is not to be disclosed to any other person, or used in the public domain, and that no action is taken (other than internally) in response to the judgment. Reference is invited to PD40E paras 2.1 to 2.9.

19. Orders following judgment

19.1 Where a judgment is made available in draft before being given in open court the parties should, in advance of that occasion, exchange drafts of the desired consequential order. It is highly undesirable that one party should spring a proposal on the other for the first time when judgment is handed down. Where the parties are agreed as to the consequential order and have supplied to the judge a copy of the same signed by all parties or their representatives, attendance at the handing down of the judgment is not necessary. If it is not possible for there to be an effective hearing to determine the consequential relief when a judgment is handed down, the hearing will be adjourned for a short period which should not exceed 28 days. A standard order for such situations is Annex F to this guide.

It may well be appropriate for oral argument about costs or other consequential matters to be undertaken by a junior advocate and parties should consider this.

19.2 Advocates are reminded of their responsibility to draft, agree and lodge orders for sealing promptly following any hearing. In the event of dispute as to the wording of an order, consideration should be given as to whether the matter may be resolved by the court on paper. In the event that a hearing is required, the hearing should be listed as soon as practicable.

20. Appeals from the Comptroller

Patents

20.1 By virtue of statute, these lie only to the High Court (and not the Intellectual Property Enterprise Court). They are now governed by Part 52 (see Rule 63.16(1)). Permission to appeal is not required. Note that the Comptroller must be served with a Notice of Appeal (Rule 63.16(3)). The appellant has the conduct of the appeal and he or his representative should, within 2 weeks of lodging the appeal, contact the Chancery Listing Officer with a view to arranging a hearing date. The appellant must ensure that the appeal is set down as soon as is reasonably practicable after service of the notice of appeal. Parties are reminded that the provisions about the service of skeleton arguments apply to appeals from the Comptroller.

Registered Designs

20.2 Appeals in registered designs cases may be brought before the High Court or the Appointed Person. Appeals to the High Court are assigned to the Patents Court (Rule 63.16(2)). Permission to appeal is not required. Note that the Comptroller must be served with a Notice of Appeal (Rule 63.16(3)).

Appeals on paper only

20.3 The court will hear appeals on paper only if that is what the parties desire. If the appellant is willing for the appeal to be heard on paper only, he should contact the respondent and United Kingdom Intellectual Property Office at the earliest opportunity to discover whether such a way of proceeding is agreed. If it is, the Chancery Listing Office should be informed as soon as possible. The parties (and the Chancery Listing Officer if he/she desires) should liaise amongst themselves for early preparation of written submissions and bundles and provide the court with all necessary materials.

21. Appeals to the Court of Appeal

21.1 The Court of Appeal has issued guidance as to the procedure for all intellectual property appeals, including appeals from the Patents Court. This is reproduced in Annex G to this guide.

Annex D: Practice Statement: Listing of cases for trial in the Patents Court

Issued: [n] February 2022

The Patents Court endeavours to bring patent cases on for trial where possible within 12 months of the claim being issued. To this end, the following procedure will be adopted.

1. The parties will be expected (a) to start to consider potential trial dates as soon as is reasonably practicable after the service of the proceedings and (b) to discuss and attempt to agree trial dates with each other when seeking to agree directions for trial.
2. The starting point for listing trials is the current applicable Trial Window advertised by the Chancery Division Listing Office. Patent cases will be listed on the basis that the Trial Windows are divided as follows: estimated hearing time (including pre-reading and preparation of closing submissions) between 2 and 5 days; estimated hearing time (including pre-reading and preparation of closing submissions) between 5 and 10 days; and estimated hearing (including pre-reading and preparation of closing submissions) over 10 days.
3. Where it will enable a case to be tried within 12 months, or shortly thereafter, the Court may list a trial up to one month earlier than the applicable Trial Window without the need for any application for expedition.
4. The Court will use its case management powers in a more active manner than hitherto, with a view to dealing with cases justly and at proportionate cost in accordance with CPR rule 1.1. This may have the effect of setting limits on hearing times that enable cases to be listed promptly. For example, the Court may direct that a case estimated at 6 days will be heard in 5 days, and may allocate time between the parties in a manner which enables that to be achieved.
5. Where it makes a significant difference to the time which cases must wait to be listed for trial and it will not cause significant prejudice to any party, cases may be listed without reference to the availability of counsel instructed by the parties.
6. Parties may seek the listing of a trial prior to the CMC if the trial estimate and the subject matter of the trial is agreed, or subject only to disputes which can be resolved at a short hearing. Parties should approach the Chancery Division Listing Office about this in the first instance.

These steps do not exclude the possibility of cases being expedited where expedition is warranted. Nor do they exclude the possibility of the parties opting to use the streamlined procedure or the Shorter Trial pilot scheme or the Flexible Trial pilot scheme.

This Practice Statement is issued with the concurrence of the Chancellor of the High Court. It supersedes the Practice Statement issued on 10 December 2015.

Annex E: Standard trial bundles in the Patents Court

Introduction

The objective of this direction is to have a standard arrangement of bundles so that, as every document is produced in the course of the litigation, it is put in its place in the standard arrangement and the bundles do not subsequently have to be re-arranged or re-ordered, and the lawyers can continue using the same bundles, from the CMC up to and during the trial (recognising that for some interim applications it may be appropriate to have an application bundle specific for the hearing in addition to the standard bundles). Therefore, all that will be needed for trial would be preparation of additional copies for the judge, witnesses and stenographer.

There is a conflict between the need to avoid re-doing bundles as a case progresses, which requires documents to be added to the end of existing bundles, and the desire for documents to be in a sensible order, which in pleadings or technical literature bundles may not follow the order in which the documents are produced in the litigation. It has to be accepted that this direction requires a degree of prescriptiveness, but there also needs to be some sensible flexibility and co-operation between the parties' solicitors, particularly in multi-patent cases.

A new document should generally be added to the end of an existing bundle, and bundles should generally not require re-ordering; the new document either adds to an existing bundle or starts a new bundle. Therefore, whenever any party serves a document they should also serve a new index page for the bundle(s) in which the document being served is to be placed. Amended documents should replace the unamended version in the bundle, and Responses to Part 18 Requests and Responses to Notices to Admit should replace the Request or Notice in the bundle.

Confidentiality

Confidential material can appear in a number of places – within a skeleton, pleading, PPD, witness statement or exhibit to a witness statement. The objective is that all confidential material is contained in a separate confidential bundle, with a redacted version or cross-referenced page in the relevant main bundle.

The preferred practice is that sections of a document which contain confidential information are contained in a separate confidential annex or exhibit, which is placed in the separate confidential bundle. In some cases, where this is not feasible, the party serving a document should provide a redacted version to go in the main bundle, and include a full version containing the confidential material (highlighted or underlined), or at least particular sections containing the confidential information, for inclusion in the confidential bundle. This has the additional advantage that the parties will then have redacted versions of witness statements or expert reports, which can be made available in Court under CPR 32.13.

In cases where the confidential material is voluminous or confidentiality regimes are complex the parties should agree as early as possible on the way in which it can be dealt with.

Cross-referencing

It should be possible to include bundle references (in bold) for all documents referred to in witness statements and expert reports, since the location in the bundles of all exhibits will be determined when the evidence is finalised. Separate side annotation can thus be avoided.

All references to exhibits and other documents, including those in reply evidence, should refer to the actual bundle and tab number.

Duplication of exhibits

Where more than one of a party's witnesses or experts refers to the same document, it should be exhibited to only one statement or report, and the others should refer to that exhibit.

If the defendant's witnesses refer to documents which are also exhibited to the claimant's evidence, the duplicated exhibit should be removed from the defendant's exhibits bundle and replaced by a placeholder which cross-refers to the claimant's exhibits bundle.

Technical literature

Copies of all technical literature and other documents referred to in an expert report or witness statement should be provided in the bundles, usually as exhibits or in the technical literature bundle, but possibly elsewhere (eg prior art bundle).

Since in most cases there is little technical literature, the default position is to exhibit technical literature to an expert report or witness statement.

If it appears to either party's solicitors that there is likely to be a suitable amount of technical literature for a separate bundle, they should raise it with the other side. If they all agree, then there will be a separate Technical Literature bundle, Bundle L.

Since cross-references to the bundles are included in expert reports and witness statements when served, the bundle(s) L need to be divided between:

- i. publications referred to in Claimant's evidence in chief,
- ii. publications referred to in Defendant's evidence in chief
- iii. publications referred to in Claimant's evidence in reply
- iv. publications referred to in Defendant's evidence in reply

Rearranging the literature into chronological order following service of the reply evidence should be avoided; it would involve re-jigging the bundle(s), and re-doing the cross-references in the expert reports and witness statements, at a busy period in a case, and is an expenditure of time which this direction is designed to avoid.

Amendment of the patent

If the patentee applies to amend the patent in suit, the parties will need to agree where the relevant documents will be included in the bundles (eg proposed amended specification and claims in the "A.n" series of bundles, statements of case in the "B.n" etc series: or in some cases, all in one separate bundle may be more sensible).

Pagination

Separate pagination should be used within in each tab. Where a document already has clear page numbers, like a technical publication, then it does not need separate pagination. Documents (eg bundles of correspondence) should be paginated before service.

Standard bundles

A.1 Patent(s) (usually comb-bound)

A.2 Priority documents and application(s) as filed (when priority and added matter are in issue).

B.1 Pleadings, Orders and Notices. This will include pleadings, documents referred to in the pleadings (except the pleaded prior art), orders, lists of documents, PPDs, any technical primer and any Civil Evidence Act Notices (without annexed documents).

The bundle should be filled chronologically for the pleadings. Thereafter, tabs can be held open for documents which the parties know will be served (eg Order for Directions, Lists of Documents, Product/Process Description, Primer) and other documents can be added chronologically after these tabs.

To avoid re-arranging the bundle, Part 18 Requests should be added to the end of the bundle at the time of service, and replaced by the Response when served. The same applies mutatis mutandis to Admissions.

[NB: for the judge, a comb-bound copy of the technical primer should be provided.]

B.2 Pleaded Prior Art.

C.1 Claimant's Evidence. This bundle will include both fact and expert evidence (including witness statements served with a Civil Evidence Act Notice). Reply evidence should be added to bundle C.1 when it is served.

C.2, C.3, etc. Exhibits to the Claimant's evidence

The principle with exhibits is that the exhibits to each witness statement or report are contained in one bundle (or section of a bundle), and the tab numbers follow the exhibit numbers, even when split over two bundles.

All documents referred to in a statement or report should be referred to as exhibits; to refer to some as annexes or appendices can cause confusion.

The preference is that each bundle contains the exhibits of one witness/expert, so that reply exhibits can be added to the end. This avoids the inconvenience of subdividing bundles, which would result in two runs of tab numbers.

Where this is not practicable, it may be better to abandon the principle of tab numbers matching exhibit numbers, in the interest of avoiding two runs of the same tab numbers in a single bundle. In such a case, reply exhibits would have to follow the exhibits to all the evidence in chief, as trying to insert each witness's reply exhibits immediately after their exhibits in chief will require too much rearrangement of bundles.

If one expert's exhibits go over more than one (sensibly filled) bundle then it should continue to the next bundle (C.2/C.3, and so on).

CONF-C This bundle will include the claimant's documents which contain confidential information of either Party.

D.1 Defendant's Evidence (as above).

D.2, D.3, etc. Exhibits to the Defendant's Evidence (as above).

CONF-D This bundle will include the defendant's confidential documents (as above).

E. Documents referred to in Civil Evidence Act Notices (or E.1, E.2 etc. if more than one bundle)(other than witness statements).

F, G. Selected documents from Claimant's / Defendant's Disclosure (to the extent not exhibited to witness statements)

H. Documents from Interim Hearings (only if required). These could include, for example, evidence from interim injunctions or other interim applications, transcripts of hearings, or interim judgments to the extent that these are going to be referred to at trial. Where evidence in the form of witness statements is included, the exhibits should be in a separate bundle H.2.

I. Selected Inter-Solicitor correspondence (only if and to the extent required)

L. Technical Literature (if agreed by parties).

S. Skeletons

T. Transcripts

X. Documents handed up at trial

CXX[witness initials] – those documents provided by the Claimant for cross examination

DXX[witness initials] – those documents provided by the Defendant for cross-examination

Any other documents which are case specific can be included with the parties' agreement in bundles using any of the remaining letters.

Notes on bundles

Bundle indices

There is no need to repeat the whole title of the action on the index: it is better to aim to get the entire index to a bundle on one sheet.

An index should be intelligent: thus "Exhibit AGS3 to the first affidavit of Anthony Graham Snooks" is not as helpful as "AGS3 - 1989 Accounts".

It should be made clear in the index if documents are amended, redacted/non-confidential or contain confidential information.

Front- and back-sheets

Front- and back-sheets should be discarded from copy documents in the bundles. For exhibits, the exhibit number should instead be written in the top right-hand corner of the first page. This makes it easier to identify the document when looking for it in the bundle.

Bundle labels

Bundles should be clearly labelled with a brief description of their contents. There is no need to repeat the entire title of the action. Ideally a large sticker, legible at a distance (e.g. "B.1 PLDGS") should be used. Remember people have to find bundles in a rack or stand.

A similar sticker should appear in the top left inside of the bundle - so that the reader can see which bundle he is looking at without having to look at the front.

Binders

All bundles should be strong enough for practical use. Both ring binders (preferably with locking devices) and lever-arch are suitable. Do not use large lever-arch files for a small quantity of documents. In the case of both, do not overload. Binding techniques which mean that the bundle will not lie open should be avoided.

Different colours for different volumes aids ready identification, although clear labels can do the same job. A different colour for the confidential bundles is much encouraged.
